

Tulane EES graduate student's work featured in the Washington Post

February 16th, 2024

|

View PDF

Photo of a Coastwide Monitoring Reference System site (Photo by Guandong Li)

Guandong Li, a graduate student in the Tulane Earth and Environmental Sciences department, was featured in a Washington Post article for his group's recent study on Louisiana's coastal wetlands. The article is titled "A 'collapse' is looming for Louisiana's coastal wetlands, scientists say." Read the article here.